Synopsis:

It is trite law that payment claims and payment responses must comply with all the requirements in the Security of Payment Act ("SOPA") for them to be valid. In this connection, there have been numerous court cases discussing issues relating to payments claims and payment responses. Of particular significance are issues concerning the contents of, service of, and the raising of objections to, payment claims under the SOPA. This seminar will provide an overview of:

a) The typical steps and issues leading to the commencement of an adjudication;

b) The process confronting parties after the adjudication determination;

c) Recent developments arising from court decisions relating to payment claims and response under the SOPA and their practical implications for the industry.
