Singapore will face three key challenges in workplace safety and health if we don’t act today. We have a rapidly aging workforce; an increased incidence of chronic diseases; and an emergence of new health threats (e.g., hazards arising from the introduction of new technologies, musculoskeletal disorder from the frequent use of mobile phones and tablets, etc). Diminished health and injury, whether caused by work or not, reduces quality of life, work output and income. There is an urgent need for businesses to be better prepared to manage these challenges.

On 24-25 Aug 2016, world-renowned experts and business leaders in workplace safety and health will gather in Singapore to share their knowledge and insights on how businesses can overcome these challenges. Sign up for The Singapore WSH Conference 2016 to find out how you can transform these challenges into opportunities.
